My darling Husband: ——

Received your wonderful letter this morning. You are the most wonderful of all the husbands in the world dear, and try as I can, it is utterly impossible for me to tell you how much I love you. But, honey, dear, you know how much, don't you? I am sure that it won't be long before we will be together again and behind me — no more separating; I have had enough already, and here it is only one short week that you have gone. Hereafter, please God, things will be different, and no matter where the place is we will go together. I realize that it is impossible now, so honey love, I am trying to make the best of it. I only hope it won't be long before I join you again.

Things do look very bright for you, and I am constantly praying that it will continue so. It is very kind of everyone ~~the~~ to try & help you, because that is what you need now. Besides money, it means something much more than money, and ~~that~~ is, encouragement. Of all things, precious, don't become discouraged. Things are bound to come our way now — & I feel that everything is just going to be much, much better than either you or I ever dreamed possible. Don't get worked up and nervous, dear; just take things cool & calmly, — look around and consider carefully which and what is best. It is only natural that you should feel a bit ~~worked up~~ excited now, but, dear, don't allow it to become a habit. Remember this, dear, and do it for my sake. Always remember that I want you to take care going to help all I can and love forever.

Do you know, precious that your telegram only came at 12.30 yesterday (Tuesday) morning. Can you beat that! There is certainly some delay somewhere. As to your receiving mail from me, I expected my first letter would reach you Saturday. Mum received a letter the morning which I read, of course before I left. I then knew I would receive one at the hospital and was on pins and needles until I got it. I expect that next week, I'll begin to stay down here.

Mum is feeling well, honey, so don't worry. Everyone is feeling fine and comfortable and now that things are brightening up a bit for of your health. Won't you honey?

I am certainly happy that you got your money from A. L. Hurrah about your desk and typewriter! I do hope you get Lowell Taylor's proposition. It would be dandy. As for the "female of the species" holding no attraction for you, — there's just my sentiments. You will do much better, I am sure. That you will do your best and do what I wish you, too", honey; I always know and that is why I love you so much. I trust in you, as I always did, with all my heart. I realize how happy I should be in having you, — you are simply a dear, wonderful husband whom I am you, we are real happy. Don't become worried or nervous because there is absolutely no cause for it. They are going to write you a letter to-day.

How is Mr. Lazar? Did you have him at auntie's yet? Did you see his wife? By now you must have visited the Golds. How did you find them? Besides The Societies; besides business, it will mean a little recreation. I am happy your uncle is giving you a toast. He partially realizes, now, just as you say, what he has done. Did you see your aunt yet? Was she, or her meals changed any? How about her desk? Did you get any of it? Give my regards to your uncle. Because he is helping you I am beginning to like him. With that Brantsky bunch away, he is go-ginning to become himself. What did they do, get away with his money? Are they in business independently or are they living on the income of your uncle's money. Don't bunch that.

I do wish honey, I could see you. How do you look. Where and what are you eating? Don't forget your "3 squares" a day.

My foot is alright. How are your headaches. You must be having some dandies, hey? Have your glasses fitted yet?

I have been up to see her. O'Hanlon twice to-day, but he was busy both times. Will try to see him again to-night as I want to have the thing settled. Expect I will have to do night duty.

As I write your letters in the afternoon, thinking they might get the night train, I do not ~~send~~ write your kiss and wishes for a pleasant dream. But I do not forget the honey.

Will close with all my love and kiss Everlovingly

Frances.

The writing is awful, I know. But am writing between dis-
